The First West Va. Legislature. HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Sketches Personal, Political and Biographical. EPHRAIM BEE, from Doddridge.

Ephraim Bee, the member from Doddridge, was born December 26, 1802, and is therefore in his sixty-first year. He is a native of what is now Marion county; and was born in a house no longer standing, on what is now known as the "Reynear Hall farm'"immedi tely opposite Benton's Ferry, on the Tygart's Valley river. His father built the first boat ever used at that ferry. His parents were from Salem county, New Jersey, and returned thither when Ephraim was about two years old and remained for about thirteen years. They then returned to Virginia and located in Preston county, and his father died there, leaving a widow and twelve children. Ephraim was bound out to a blacksmith to learn the trade, and got along so fast that in three years he left his boss to get along the best he could, and went to Elk creek in Harrison county and worked a while at "Jackson's Forge," belonging to Judge Jackson of Clarksburg.-From there he shortly after went to Pruntytown, in Taylor county, and there bought a set of blacksmith's tools on credit and renoved to Doddridge county to a place called Middle Island, situated on the creek of that name. Soon afterward he married, still before the age of twenty.

For thirty years (from the time of going to the trade) Mr. Bee worked at the forge, and as there can be no higher praise than to say that a man excels in his calling, it is proper to say that Mr Bee was an excellent blacksmith, the best in all his region of country, and was patronized from far and near. During twenty years of this time, he kept a house or public entertainment or "tavern," and for several years was engaged in merchandizing—was black-smith, tavern keeper, and merchant, at the same time. He was besides mail contractor for many years, and a magistrate. In 1852 he abandoned blacksmithing and moved upon the farm where he now lives. Latterly has been jobbing in hands and owns many thousand of acres of wild lands n that region. Mr. Bee opposed the secesson of Virginia from the time it was first talked of; and was the first man on the waters of Hughes' The Ci.izen's Deposit Bank river, in the spring of 'G1, before the passage of the ordinance, to raise the stars and stripes over his house. He also be-gan the organization of the first home guard company raised in his county, and has been a member of it ever since. He of course voted against the ordinance of constitution when first adopted, and for this important interest. he amended constitution.

Politically, he was always a democrat, up to the repeal of the Missouti Compro-mise by the Kansas-Nebraska bill. The first, second, and third votes he ever gave were for Gen. Jackson. The Kansas Nebraska business put him out with the democratic party, and he voted in '56 for Fillmore, and in '60 for Bell and Everett. Has always until recently been a strongly pro-slavery man, but never owned but one slave. When the rebellion broke out he deprecated the agitation of that question, but as soon as he discovered that slavery was at the bottom of the rebellion and was forcing a bloody war on the country, his convictious underwent a complete change. He voted for the constitution with the emancipation amendment in it, favored the President's proclamation last September; and wants every Southern State in rebellion to be brought back as free States, and to let slavery alone in the border States to be managed as they see fit. He would be glad if to day Virginia were free soil from the Allegheny to the tide-water, and if West Virginia had not a negro in it. He is even in favor of arming the negroes, and making them help whip the rebels into subjection. Wouldn't give twenty-five cents for a hundred of the best negroes he ever saw, and taken altogether may be set down as a pretty strong anti slavery man at this time. He is so strong a Union man that he told the people when electioneering last spring that by the women and children. Mr. Bee is not connected with any Christian denomination, though he was at an early age a member of the Seventh day Baptist Church. He has been married wice and has fourteen children living.

His claim to a seat in the House is con-tested by Mr. J. H. Diss Debar. The matter is undergoing examination by the com-mittee on elections, &c. The probabilities are that Mr. Bee will be allowed to retain

In person Mr. Bee is about five feet ten or eleven inches in stature, and of large muscular frame. Shaves smooth and wears his hair, which is light colored, and slightly tinged with grey, cut very short; eyes light blue, and face rather striking but not handsome. In conversation talks incessantly and with a peculiar tone of voice which runs up an octave about the middle of each sentence leaving upon the hearer an impression of grief. Has an inexhaustipraces and occasions, and is therefore the centre of every circle he happens to get into the theory and practice of the best systems to lisquite as widely known in Western Virginia as many men who have specified.

An Educational System for the State of West Va.—Interesting Suggestions from a Distinguished Instruc-tor.

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE, Meadville, Pa. July 4th, 1863.

DEAR SIE:-Yours of the 30th ult. arrived last evening. You may very safely as-sume that I feel a deep interest in the success of West Virginia. I doubt not the States and Presidents;" though brought forth in troublous times, will speedily rival that of its parent and its elder sisters.-God grant that those on whom the respon sibility devolves may have grace and wis-dom to lay a deep and wide and firm foundation for the superstructure of its coming greatness. In regard to Education, concerning which you ask me for some hints, I would respectfully suggest that one of several courses may be pursued by the Legis-

1. Adopt, with slight amendments, the School Law of the old State. To this the sufficient objection is, its defects are so ma-by and great that nothing short of entireooking only to the wishes of such counties as may be impatient of the delay required to procure a proper law for the whole State. The result of this would very likely be a piece of complicated botch work. All such make-shifts would soon have to be done over again. 3. Attempt, at once, the preparation and incre careful consideration, and with the highest regard for the many excellent men in the Legislature. I may set be allowed to say that in regard to no other subject are they likely to be less prepared for immediate action. On this subject an ill advised, hastily prepared and defective law is most account to be depressed. To anticipate earnestly to be deprecated. To anticipate, provide for and harmonize the diverse and municipal, of an efficient, comprehensive and yet simple and economical School pieces of legislative mechanism in the world. In regard to no other subject have our older States blundered more, as witness the almost endless enactments, revisals, supplements, repeals and re-enact-ments which, on this subject, crowd their statute books. So much so is this the case in some of the States most advanced in same direction. He also voted for a divi- one of the most laborious and perplexing ion of the State in October, '61-for the duties assigned to the officer in charge of But one other course can be suggested which is at all likely to recommend itself to the wise and thoughtful. Of course to do nothing is not for a moment to be thought of. This would be gross deriliction to one of the most immediate and sacred interests intrusted to the Rep resentatives of the people. Every plea in its favor might be urged even more plausisbly in favor of doing nothing in all things else. Years of earnest, patient toil will be required to bring any law into easy and intellegent working order all over the State. It seems to me the Legislature should endeavor to secure as soon as it can well be done, the enactment of a law, sound in its principles, simple in its provisions and general in its adaptation, and which will, as far as possible, not stand in need of subsequent tinkering; and, as the way opens, let it be gradually and yet as promptly as possible put into operation. What I would recommend then is substantially what I had the pleasure of submitting at the close of "a Plan of Educa-tion in West Virginis," farnished by re-quest of Dr. Battele, chairman of the Committee on Education in the Convention which framed the Constitution of the State, published in the Intelligeneer of Dec. 13th, 1861, a copy of which I euclose, viz: Let provision be made by the Legislature, and let the Governor be instructed to appoint a suitable commissioner, with directions to examine some of the leading systems of education in our own and foreign States, he was for sustaining the government if it took every man is the country to do it, and the government had to be carried on draft of such laws as might be wanted by and would be likely acceptable to the people and Legislature of the State. This includes first, and chiefly, the preparation of a suitable statute, comprehe ing, as far as possible, all the educational interests of the State. I say suitable, because what might be appropriate for other States might not in all respects be test for West Virginia; and I say comprehending all the educational interests of the State because of my deep conviction that in order to a truly simple, efficient and inex-pensive (I use the term not in a miserly but comparative sense) school law, it is necessary that all the educational interests, properly so called, of the State should, as far as possible, form parts of one general cupying definite relations to each other.

This may be, not only just as well, but much better than the often times loose, hap-hazard and unequal legislation which the theory and practice of the cess systems.

Is quite as widely known in Western Virginia as many men who have spent their lives in public station. Is the founder, and was for a number of years the "Grand Lama" of the celebrated order of the "E" and good men will in such matters differ, Goodrich, S. M. Goodrich, F. Goodrich, E.

and perhaps widely. Such a report, propexty prepared and widely distributed, in which the salient points of those school systems most in vogue elsewhere, would be briefly and clearly presented, accompanied by a few plain and cogent reasons for the incorporation or rejection, as the case might

Richmond, and while there initiated the greater part of the Legislature, a number of the state officials, and many gentlemen of distinction from various Southern States School Law of West Virginia would, I humbly conceive, go far to secure an immediate, general and hearty agreement in regard to those principles which, after such examination and statement, might tiation. Since coming to Wheeling Mr. sare, involves some delay and expense, but Bee has been repeatedly requested to revive I have no hesitation in asserting that it properly attended to, it would, in the end. and very largely, too, save labor, time and many of the best years of my life have been donated to this cause, and to which I am yet bound by many and strong ties, In Committee he is a working member, but should occupy no second rate position in somewhat of a drawback on account of his the great work of educating its thousands of children and youth, is my only excuse for the length of this communication I trust it will be received in the same spirit n which it was written.
